

Parineeti Chopra Regrets Post-Ishaqzaade Advice To Lose Weight And Embrace Glamour: 'My Biggest Mistake'

Bollywood actress Parineeti Chopra, who is enjoying the success of her recent film 'Amar Singh Chamkila,' reflected on the challenges she faced after the initial success of her debut film 'Ishaqzaade.' Parineeti shared that she fell into the trap of following trends, focusing mainly on commercial and glamorous roles. She revealed that there was pressure on her to lose weight and conform to the stereotypical image of a heroine post the success of 'Ishaqzaade.'

During a conversation with Raj Shamani, Parineeti mentioned how she started her career as an authentic and raw actor, which garnered her respect and love from the audience. However, looking back, she considered the next few years as a mistake, as she veered off her original path.

Parineeti recalled, "The advice that was given to me was just lose weight, become glamorous, just do the typical heroine stuff. I was very excited to do it. I just heard it and I went down that path and I tried to be glam. I tried to do just commercial films, I tried to do films where I had two songs and a guest appearance and nothing more from it."

She expressed regret over following the advice to chase big commercial projects and emulate the paths of other actresses. Parineeti acknowledged that her strength was in staying true to her unique style and the roles that resonated with her core audience. "So I wasted four to five years listening to this advice that just follows the commerce, just do big films, just do what other heroines are doing, you should also do that. That was my biggest mistake. I can't follow anyone else's career, I had to stick to what I had, what people had accepted me for," the actress added.

With projects like 'Sandeep Aur Pinky Faraar' and 'Amar Singh Chamkila,' directed by Imtiaz Ali and featuring Diljit Dosanjh, she felt a sense of returning to her authentic self.

Parineeti was asked in the same interview if being Priyanka Chopra's cousin helped her career. She recalled the low phase in her career and denied having any "unfair advantages".

Parineeti expressed, "If being related to Priyanka Chopra could've helped my career, then I wouldn't have had any flops in my career. I've seen such lows in the last 10 years."

Parineeti addressed nepotism and said, "Every person who has had some association in the industry is actually under a lot of pressure. You might get your first chance, first audition, first meeting, but after that, you're on your own and it's more difficult to prove yourself. The comparisons will never end. So, what happens is, you can be a complete outsider, and it's very difficult to survive. Or, you could be related to somebody and get that first meeting, but after that, your journey is your own," she said. Parineeti added, "Nepotism may or may not be real, but favouritism is real." The actress also mentioned that there are "camps" in Bollywood which she is not a part of and this has cost her some work.

Meanwhile, on the work front, Parineeti Chopra is currently seen in Amar Singh Chamkila. The film is directed by Imtiaz Ali and stars Diljit Dosanjh as the lead. The film is based on the life of the iconic Punjabi singer Amar Singh Chamkila. Parineeti plays Amarjot in the film, who was Chamkila's singing partner and second wife. The film is being received positively by the audience and the critics alike. Diljit and Parineeti's performances received immense praise from viewers. The film is available to stream on Netflix.

Taapsee Pannu Says She Can't Be Overtly Submissive To Paps: 'I'm Allowed To Have A Life Beyond work'

Taapsee Pannu is currently one of the leading stars of the Bollywood industry. Known for her power-packed roles in films like Pink and Badla, the talented actress has proven time and again what she is capable of. While she continues to enjoy massive praise for her films, she is often subjected to trolling for her reactions to the paparazzi. She recently opened up about the same.

In an interview with the Hindustan Times, the actress shared that paps often push and press buttons, something she is not comfortable with. "Paps feel I'm difficult, whereas I'm just being real. In an urge to get clickbait photos and captions for their Instagram pages, they sometimes push and press the buttons of all celebrities, which I am not comfortable with. As a pap, if you talk to me, and I'll have a conversation, but if you press my buttons saying, "Your last film didn't work, how does it feel?" or 'Itni der se khade hain, photo to de do', then I'm not going to indulge you. There needs to be mutual respect."

She further added that she learned a new word, 'Lajvanti' while navigating paparazzi culture. "It's for those people who try to be overtly submissive and sweet with whatever paps are saying and just laugh it off, acting dumb, and that's considered sweet, cute, and adorable. Sorry, but I can't be Lajvanti," she chuckles, adding, "If you shove the camera in my face without my consent at places where I'm not in a professional capacity, it's not fair to expect me to be suddenly entertaining you. I feel I am allowed to have a life beyond my work as an entertainer, too," she shared.

Meanwhile, on the work front, Taapsee Pannu will appear in director Mudassar Aziz's upcoming comedy film Khel Khel Mein. It also features Akshay Kumar, Fardeen Khan, and Vaani Kapoor in pivotal roles.

Rakhi Sawant Reacts To Salman Khan's Shooting Case, Compares Him With Kohinoor: 'Bhai Zyada Zaruri Hai'

The recent shooting outside Salman Khan's Galaxy Apartments in Mumbai's Bandra area on April 14 has shocked many. Anmol Bishnoi, brother of Lawrence Bishnoi, purportedly claimed responsibility for the incident in an online post and warned the Bollywood actor, describing the incident as a "trailer." Following this, actress and former Bigg Boss contestant Rakhi Sawant's video expressing concern about the threat posed by 'the Bishnois' to the Bollywood superstar, went viral. And now, she has advised Salman Khan not to stand on his balcony. Rakhi, who recently returned to Mumbai after a long stay in Dubai, made this statement during a press conference.

"That is very sad. Main bas yehi haath jor ke bolungi Salman bhai ko ke woh balcony mein aakar kabhi na khade rahe. Eid mein aur tyohar mein aate hai na? Shah Rukh Khan apne chhat pe chadh jaatey hai - jaali waali chhat pe. Ab sabko pata hai har Eid ke din Salman Khan balcony pe aate hai. Toh bhai abhi balcony ke bahar mat aao, kyunki wahi nishana ho gaya na? Main bahut royi hu mujhe jab pata chala.

Main Dubai mein thi. Bhai bas balcony pe na aye. Ek saal pehle se log shadyantra rachatey hai. Mujhe lagta hai humare desh mein Kohinoor se zyada Salman Khan zaruri hai. Woh humare legend hai. Kohinoor lekar ayoge toh kya milega? (I will only say this with folded hands to Salman bhai, that he should never stand on the balcony. Doesn't he come out during Eid and other festivals? Shah Rukh Khan climbs onto his roof - the grilled one. Now everyone knows that Salman Khan comes out on the balcony every Eid. So, don't come out on the balcony now, because that's where the target was, right? I cried a lot when I found out about it. I was in Dubai. People plot conspiracies for a year. I think Salman Khan is more important to our country than the Kohinoor. He is our legend. What will one get by bringing back the Kohinoor?)

On a related note, security and police surveillance have been significantly amped up in and around Galaxy Apartments following the firing.
