

Rhea Chakraborty 'Didn't Find The World To Be A Safe Place' Before Clean Chit: 'If A Man Came Running...'

The year 2020 marked one of the most turbulent and painful phases of Rhea Chakraborty's life. Following the death of actor Sushant Singh Rajput, Rhea found herself at the centre of an unprecedented media trial. She was arrested by the Narcotics Control Bureau over alleged drug links. She also faced multiple accusations from Sushant's family, including abetment, theft, and financial fraud. The scrutiny was relentless, public opinion unforgiving, and the pressure overwhelming. It wasn't until 2025 that the Central Bureau of Investigation finally cleared Rhea of all charges in its closure report, bringing official closure to a chapter that had already taken an immense personal toll.

In a recent chat with Nod Magazine, Rhea said, "I didn't find the world to be a safe place. I didn't feel the joy in going out. I went through my fair share of PTSD." She added, "So, even if a man came running towards me to open the door, my body would react differently."

Rhea mentioned that trolling is the cure for those who seek external validation. "This changed everything for me because I understood that the external stuff really doesn't matter," she said. Now, the scrutiny has subsided.

"I have not been trolled for a while, and it feels really, like, what happened? Like they don't care about me anymore," she said. "The only way you can catch people's attention today is through trolling. No one cares about the positive stuff. For instance, 50 million people will watch the arrest, and maybe, if you're lucky, one million will understand the clean chit," the actress mentioned.

Six years after Rhea Chakraborty's life took a drastic turn due to Sushant Singh Rajput's death, the actress is now all set to make her acting comeback. On Tuesday evening, Rhea attended the 'Next On Netflix' event in Mumbai when it was announced that she will soon be seen in the show titled Family Business. The series, which also stars Anil Kapoor and Vijay Varma in the lead, will be released later this year. Previously, she was seen as a gang leader on MTV Roadies.

Priyanka Chopra Was Stalked, Stopped Wearing Western Clothes, Recalls Mom Madhu

Priyanka Chopra, whose confidence is something many look up to, was once a baby girl. She was just 13 when her parents sent her to the US to study, and when she returned, she had a touch of an American accent in her English. She was a teenager who loved to dress up, and this had become a problem for her parents. Remembering those days, Priyanka Chopra's mother, Madhu Chopra, shared how boys used to follow her whenever she stepped out.

In an old interaction with Lehren Retro, Priyanka's mother, Madhu Chopra, spoke about the same and shared how they had enrolled the Dostana actor in a convent school in Bareilly, and they had to make sure they picked her up and dropped her in the car to ensure her safety. Madhu shared, "We put her in a convent school. We would pick and drop her in the car because her father was strict that you can't go anywhere alone. Boys started following our car, so it started getting unsafe."

Recalling a horrifying incident, Madhu recalled how a boy jumped the fence and entered the house: "One day, a boy jumped our fence and entered our house. That was scary. The next day, her father covered the entire house with iron bars, from the boundary to the terrace... even monkeys couldn't enter. That house is still the same," she added.

Priyanka's parents ended up tightening her security, and she even stopped wearing western clothes. Madhu added, "I don't know what conversation they had. The next day, she came back from school and said she wants to go shopping. I took her, and she selected such dull and drab clothes... all salwar kurtas. She selected colours like off-white, brown, beige to look dull," she said, adding, "I don't know what he said. She never told me, and he also didn't tell me, but this was the reaction. After that, she did not wear western clothes in Bareilly."

Priyanka Chopra is currently busy filming for SS Rajamouli's upcoming project Varanasi. The film, starring Priyanka with Mahesh Babu, has been in the headlines since its announcement. A recent social media post by the makers has sparked speculation that the much-anticipated film could hit theatres on Ram Navami in 2027.

Avneet Kaur shared a series of oh-so-hot pictures on her Instagram. She captioned, "I want to drip in the nectar of my own self-loving. I want to radiate to the romance of my own existence."

The Wives brings together an ensemble cast including Sonali Kulkarni, Mouni Roy, Regina Cassandra, Rahul Bhatt, Saurabh Sachdeva, Arjan Bajwa, and Freddy Daruwala. As per reports, The Wives promises to look beyond the surface-level glamour of the film industry, focusing on ambition, insecurity, and the human stories behind the facade.

As per India Today reports the director previously shared in a statement, "The Wives is a story that looks beyond the spotlight and into the personal lives that are often overshadowed by fame. It explores relationships, ambition, insecurity and emotional survival in a world driven by image and success. I wanted to tell this story with honesty and sensitivity, and I'm grateful to my cast and crew for bringing so much authenticity to the screen." The director continued, "The shoot of the film has been wrapped up, and I can't wait to see the audience reaction. The film has come out well and will start post-production soon."

Laughter Chefs 3: Tejasswi Prakash, Karan Kundrra Serve Major Barbie-Ken Vibes

Tejasswi Prakash and Karan Kundrra continue to be one of television's most adored couples, and fans can't seem to get enough of them. Their stint on Laughter Chefs have been a major highlight of the show, with their effortless chemistry, playful teasing, and goofy moments constantly winning hearts.

Ahead of an upcoming episode, the couple was spotted on the sets of Laughter Chefs, all dressed up and looking absolutely stunning. With their coordinated looks and undeniable charm, Tejasswi and Karan truly gave off major Barbie-and-Ken vibes in a paparazzi video.

Amid a sea of cheering paparazzi, Tejasswi and Karan arrived together and happily posed for the cameras. Ever the doting boyfriend, Karan first let Tejasswi take the spotlight with her solo poses. However, the television actress insisted that Karan join her first, leaving the individual shots for later. Their undeniable chemistry made the moment even more special, and the good-looking pair looked absolutely adorable.

Their outfits were just as impressive. Tejasswi opted for a pink dress featuring a corset bodice, which she paired with huge statement earrings and a cute hairstyle. Karan, on the other hand, wore goggles, a white shirt, white pants, and topped it off with a super-cool blue and white jacket. His look perfectly complemented Tejasswi's Barbie vibe, bringing full Ken energy to his appearance.

Reacting to the video, a user commented, "Wow, look at her she is looking like a Barbie doll." Another one added, "Made for each other." A fan remarked, "Evil eyes off Tejran." Another one commented, "So adorable." A user wrote, "Rab Ne Banadi Jodi." Another one termed them as the 'Most good-looking couple' "An individual complimented, "Kitne hot lag rahe hain dono, evil eyes off Tejran, love you too." "Precious babies," added another social media user.

Fans couldn't get enough of Karan and Tejasswi's Barbie-and-Ken look, and now all eyes are on the upcoming episode of Laughter Chefs to see what chaotic fun ensues there.
