Kumud Mishra and Ayesha Raza are celebrating their 18th wedding anniversary. Making the day even more special, Ayesha Raza took a trip down memory lane and shared nostalgic photos with her husband.

The first photo featured the Bollywood couple donned in traditional attire as they looked into each other's eyes. Ayesha Raza looked beautiful in a red salwar suit, while Kumud Mishra opted for a beige kurta.

The couple first met in 2004 while working on the play Shakkar Ke Paanch Daane by Manav Kaul. Ayesha was helping promote the play and caught Kumud's attention. They began talking regularly and started dating after two months. By the time Kumud turned 40, he was sure Ayesha was the one. He proposed to her, and Ayesha, already head over heels, said yes without a second thought.

The challenge was that they come from different religious backgrounds. Kumud comes from a Hindu family, while Ayesha is Muslim. Both of them knew an interfaith relationship might invite resistance. Ayesha's family had seen many interfaith marriages and was not surprised.

However, Kumud's family was hesitant; his mother objected, and his father remained silent. The actor was finally able to convince his family, and his parents agreed to the marriage. Kumud and Ayesha got married on February 9, 2008, in a simple and intimate ceremony. The couple later welcomed a son and named him Kabir.
