Hi-tech agriculture only way forward for prosperous farmers in J&K: Bharat Priye

HIMALAYAN MAIL NEWS
JAMMU, FEB 13

JKPCC Kissan Department J&KUT President Bharat Priye today issued a strong and comprehensive call for transforming the agricultural landscape of Jammu and Kashmir through large-scale adoption of modern, hi-tech farming practices. He asserted that unless urgent and concrete measures are taken to modernize agriculture, farmers will continue to struggle with low productivity, climate uncertainties, and unstable incomes. Addressing press conference in Kathua today, Bharat Priye stated that agriculture remains the backbone of J&K's rural economy, employing a significant portion of the population directly or indirectly. "If we truly want economic stability, employment generation, and sustainable development in J&KUT, we must begin with strengthening our farmers," he said.

Bharat Priye stressed that traditional farming methods alone cannot meet present-day challenges. He urged farmers to gradually adopt precision farming, polyhouse cultivation, drip and sprinkler irrigation systems, soil health card-based nutrient management, farm mechanization, and high-density plantation in horticulture. He emphasized that scientific soil testing must become mandatory practice so that farmers can reduce excessive fertilizer usage and improve productivity. He also highlighted the importance of climate-resilient seed varieties to combat erratic rainfall, prolonged dry spells, and unseasonal snowfall, which have increasingly affected crop cycles in recent years. Further, he encouraged farmers to use mobile-based agricultural advisory services, weather forecasting apps, and digital marketplaces to directly connect with buyers and reduce dependence on middlemen.

Bharat Priye noted that J&KUT holds tremendous potential in apple cultivation, saffron, basmati rice, rajma, walnut production, floriculture, organic vegetables, dairy, sheep rearing, and beekeeping. However, due to inadequate infrastructure and weak marketing systems, farmers often fail to get remunative prices. He stressed the urgent need for the establishment of cold storage chains in rural belts to prevent post-harvest losses and ensure better price realization for farmers. He also called for the creation of food processing and packaging units at the district level so that agricultural produce can be properly processed, graded, and marketed in a competitive manner.

He emphasized the importance of strengthening mandi infrastructure to facilitate transparent trading and efficient market access for farmers. Furthermore, he urged the authorities to ensure direct procurement of produce and effective implementation of the Minimum Support Price (MSP) wherever applicable.
