After Trump trip, Putin to visit China next week

NEW DELHI, MAY 16: Just days after US President Donald Trump concluded his high-profile Beijing trip, Russian President Vladimir Putin would visit China from May 19-20 for talks with Chinese President Xi Jinping. Putin and Jinping would discuss bilateral relations and exchange views on key international and regional issues, Kremlin said in a statement. The two leaders were also likely to sign a joint declaration, marking the 25th anniversary of the Russia-China Treaty of Good-Neighbourliness and Cooperation.

The visit comes amid heightened geopolitical tensions over the Iran conflict, Taiwan and the Ukraine war, with Moscow and Beijing projecting closer coordination following the Trump-Xi summit in Beijing earlier this week. Putin is also scheduled to discuss economic and trade cooperation with Chinese Premier Li Qiang. News of Putin's forthcoming trip arrives one day after US President Donald Trump departed China, following the first presidential visit to Beijing in almost a decade. Although Trump and Xi touted several broad trade deals, they appeared to make little public progress on key sticking points related to Taiwan or the US-Israel war in Iran. They also touched on the Russia-Ukraine war, in which China is officially neutral and Xi has presented himself as a mediator.
