

Tridha Choudhury Says Newcomers No Longer Sign Contracts Blindly Out Of Excitement

Actress Tridha Choudhury opened up about the practise in the industry of newcomers signing contracts without fully comprehending the long-term implications it might have on their career.

During an exclusive conversation with IANS, Tridhi said that it does not happen in the industry as much as it used to. The 'Aashram' actress was asked, "Do you think newcomers often sign contracts out of excitement without understanding the long-term impact on their careers?" Sharing her viewpoint on the subject, Tridha said, "I do not think that happens as much anymore. I have personally experienced situations where I worked with big production houses and compromised on my fees or gave extra time simply out of respect for their experience and stature." Tridha said that while it can be a form of exploitation for the newcomers, the banners also put in a lot of effort and money to support and promote the actor. "You could even call it borderline exploitation at times, but the positive side is that they also market, support, and promote you in return," she added.

On the professional front, Tridha was recently seen in Sanjay Dutt-fronted 'Aakhri Sawal'. During the interaction, she revealed what made her say yes to the drama. She shared that 'Aakhri Sawal' is deeply rooted in patriotism. Tridha explained, "I genuinely feel every Indian citizen should watch it because Aakhri Sawal is a content-driven project. The film touches upon several historical events, whether it is the demolition of Babri Masjid or the period of the Emergency. The story revolves around a student-mentor dynamic. The mentor is played by Sanjay Dutt, while the student is portrayed by Namoshi Chakraborty. I also play a student in the same institution. Through the debates between the mentor and students, the film explores many important social and historical issues." As a citizen of this country, I felt emotionally connected to the subject. Being a patriot myself, I believed this film was meant for me", she concluded.

Sara Ali Khan and Rakul Preet Singh have addressed a viral clip suggesting they ignored Wamiqa Gabbi during their film Pati Patni Aur Woh Do's promotions, explaining what actually happened during the interaction. Sara said she was surprised by the interpretation, especially because she considers Wamiqa a very good friend. She said that they are always laughing and joking around during interviews. She did so, after which Sara and Rakul were engaged in conversation, leading to the moment being misread online.

In a chat with Siddharth Kannan, Sara Ali Khan was asked about her most 'bizarre' pap video. She replied, "Recently there was a pap video where they thought I was ignoring Wamiqa. But I thought Wamiqa is my very good friend. I think she is, and we laugh in interviews all the time."

"So I am like ye to ulta ho raha hai. (So I'm like, this is happening the other way around). Interviewers think we're extremely close and just laughing together. Meanwhile, paparazzi think we don't get along. I don't even understand what's going on anymore," said Sara, laughing off claims of ignoring Wamiqa.

Rakul Preet Singh said the video suggested that she and Sara Ali Khan were talking while Wamiqa Gabbi was being 'ignored'. "We were like, huh? When did that even happen? And specifically, what happened that day was that Wamiqa was standing in the centre, and she said, 'Guys, can I stand on the right?' We said okay, so she moved to the right. And we were just talking about something over here," clarified Rakul Preet.

Starring Ayushmann Khurrana alongside Sara Ali Khan, Rakul Preet Singh and Wamiqa Gabbi, Pati Patni Aur Woh Do released in theatres on May 15. Directed by Mudassar Aziz, the film is described as a spiritual sequel to the 2019 hit Pati Patni Aur Woh, which featured Kartik Aaryan, Bhumi Pednekar and Ananya Panday in lead roles.

Ayushmann On Breaking Up With Tahira While discussing people who end relationships after achieving success, Ayushmann recalled going through something similar in his own life.

He said, "I have gone through a similar situation. I was 20 at that time. I said the same things to my girlfriend, who is now my wife. She started laughing and asked me, 'What has happened to you?' I had just won Roadies, but in my head, I was the most popular guy in Chandigarh."

The actor added, "I broke up with her for a while to focus on myself. I was like, 'I don't have time for relationships. I have to invest time in myself.'"

Ayushmann then joked about how men often evolve with age. He said, "Men have this deep tendency of starting off as a huge red flag and then suddenly becoming a green flag by the time they are in their mid-30s. I think it's a journey we all take. I think I am a green flag now."

However, the breakup did not last very long. Around six months later, Ayushmann realised his mistake and reconciled with Tahira. The couple eventually got married when he was 24.

By the time Ayushmann made his Bollywood debut as a lead actor with Vicky Donor, he had already become a father of two children.
