

No Bigg Boss for Elnaaz Norouzi?

Speculation around Elnaaz Norouzi's participation in the upcoming 20th season of Bigg Boss has been doing the rounds for a while now, with her name popping up on the list of expected contestants. But according to sources close to the actor, that speculation may have gotten ahead of itself, because Elnaaz's attention right now is firmly elsewhere.

"She's currently in LA to promote her Hollywood film, The Fix. And that's really where her focus is at the moment," a source close to the actress shared. "There's no truth to the Bigg Boss talk. She has a Hollywood film releasing in September, and that's taking up all her time and energy right now," the source added.

Elnaaz plays the female lead in The Fix, marking her second major Hollywood outing after 2023's Kandahar, which saw her share screen space with Gerard Butler.

Directed by Guy Moshe, The Fix is an action thriller in which she stars opposite Liam Neeson and Zachary Levi. With the film set to hit theatres on September 11, it's being said that the actor and her team are keeping their focus squarely on the release.

Ravneet Rabab's Kashmir connection finds a voice in 'Sajjna Ve'

Punjabi love song set in Kashmir isn't unusual. But Sajjna Ve, the latest single by independent Punjabi singer-songwriter Ravneet Rabab, deliberately walks against the tide in more ways than one. Rabab tells the story through a woman's eyes, and while Kashmir plays a postcard-perfect backdrop in music videos, Sajjna Ve looks beyond its scenic beauty to tell a poignant story of love, longing and humanity.

Ravneet's road to becoming an artiste wasn't conventional. Although she holds a master's degree in Clinical Psychology and once imagined pursuing it as a career, music eventually became impossible to ignore. "I realised I was willing to sacrifice my sleep for music," she says. "That's when I knew it wasn't just a hobby anymore—it was what I wanted to do for the rest of my life."

Ravneet immersed herself in artistic pursuits from an early age, participating in school and college music competitions. Her greatest influence has always been her mother. "She encouraged me to learn Gurbani Kirtan. I wasn't very interested at first, but over time I completely fell in love with it." That foundation shaped not only her voice but also her relationship with music. Keen to expand her skills, she learned guitar through a mix of formal lessons and hours of self-learning on YouTube before posting cover songs online. Those covers gradually opened the door to writing and releasing her own original music.

Once the song Sajjna Ve was complete, Ravneet instinctively where its visuals belonged. "When the audio was ready, I felt it had a certain warmth and innocence. Kashmir felt like the perfect place to capture those emotions." But the music video goes beyond picturesque scenery. "The ending was inspired by the story of Adil (Syed Adil Hussain Shah), the pony guide from the Pahalgam attack who lost his life while trying to save a tourist. The video reminds us how fragile life is and how humanity can shine even in the darkest moments." The experience also left a personal impact. "I experienced the warmth and kindness of the people of Kashmir. Their generosity and hospitality made the experience so special." ReligiousMusic

Like many independent musicians, Ravneet wears far more hats than simply being an artiste. "Being independent means we're responsible for almost everything," she says. "We're creating music, managing releases, handling social media, marketing our work and building our own audience." She believes social media has opened unprecedented opportunities but has also transformed the demands of the job. "Along with making music, we're constantly thinking about content, editing videos, creating that three-second Instagram hook, marketing our work and staying relevant."

As she continues releasing original music and performing live, Ravneet says one part of her musical journey will never change. "Gurbani will always remain an important part of my life. I'm
